

‘Nature’-An Innovative Environmental Challenge from the perspectives of literature

Dr. Tinni Dutta

Assistant Professor, Department Of Psychology, Muralidhar Girls’ College

Abstract:

In this complex modern era our approach to nature is to beat into submission. We would understand a better chance of survival if we accommodated ourselves within the laps of nature and viewed it appreciatively instead of aseptically and impersonally. The earth’s vegetation is a part of web life in which there are intimate and essential relation between plants and earth, plants and human beings. If we thoughtfully with full awareness unite with nature, we have beneficial psychological effects on us. It would reduce our stress, escalates our potentials and enables us to feel good and mentally sound. Populations are kept in check by something the ecologists called the resistance of the environment. These have led us to nourish and flourish nature and develop soothing personality development. It also brings nature ecologically into our popular consciousness.

Keywords: Nature, Poetry, Environmental Health.