Abstract

This research article critically examines the violence faced by LGBTQI+ individuals in Bangladesh by monitoring online news media in the year 2022. The study aims to provide an in-depth analysis of the nature, extent, and implications of violence against the LGBTQI+ community in Bangladesh, as portrayed in online news media. By analyzing news reports, this research sheds light on the socio-political context, factors contributing to violence, and potential strategies for addressing this issue. The findings emphasize the urgent need for comprehensive legal protections, awareness campaigns, and social inclusion to combat violence against LGBTQI+ individuals in Bangladesh. This research aims to contribute to the understanding of the challenges faced by the LGBTQI+ community in the country. The findings of this study are expected to provide valuable insights for policymakers, activists, and organizations working towards promoting the rights, safety, and well-being of LGBTQI+ individuals in Bangladesh.
