

The Challenges that Face Kuwaiti Students with Disabilities in the US Universities

Ali M Alansari

Associate Professor at Kuwait University, College of Education, Educational administration department, Kuwait

Abstract

The aim of this study is to explore the challenges faced by Kuwaiti undergraduate students with disabilities in the US Universities. Data was collected through a qualitative study utilizing open-ended interviews with eight participants. The results indicate that these students face numerous challenges, including administrative, environmental, social, architectural, and financial issues, as well as psychological problems and difficulties in conducting research. Furthermore, the study highlighted the necessary facilities for these students and emphasized the role of Kuwait's cultural office in supporting undergraduate students with special needs in the USA.

Keywords: Higher education, The US University, Challenges, International Students with Disabilities