Abstract

The article proposed to analyze the role of the education council in ensuring the right to education for students in public schools in times of a pandemic. In addition, through this article, it provided a view on the importance of this normative and supervisory body for educational activities. Throughout the text, a documentary investigation and bibliographical survey was carried out on the norms that guarantee the student the right to education in a non-face-to-face manner during a pandemic or when proven necessary for health reasons. It should be noted that the education council is responsible for regulating the specificities of local education and supervising educational policies in the pedagogical, administrative, financial scope and in articulation with public authorities. In this sense, the municipal council of education, a broadly representative and democratic body, is an instrument from the search for teaching qualification to the educational challenges in times of crisis experienced in 2020 to 2022 in Brazil and in the world.
